

Road To Damascus (a.k.a) This Road

Living on my own a thousand miles from home
On this road I'm on
Then you called my name and challenged me to change
This road I'm on
It's never too late; it's never too late

To turn it around after the lightning had struck me down
Walking away; blinded by the light in the bright of day

Doing as I please brought me to my knees
On this road I'm on
Then you called my name and now I'll never take the same
Road I'm on
It's never too late; it's never too late

To turn it around after the lightning had struck me down
Walking away; blinded by the light in the bright of day
Tear me apart if that's what it takes to remake my heart
No more to say; blinded by the light in the bright of day

The harder I try to walk alone
The further I stumble down this empty road I'm on
I just wanna go home
