The Vines

I'm in a tailspin again,
I can't stop spinning around;
I'm in a free fall and it's my fault,
And I'm dangerously close to the ground

I can see clearly now
Just how severely out of line I was
If I could reconcile
If I could stay awhile in the vines of your love

I throw my hands over my head
I wish to take back what I said
The tears you cry tell me it doesn't always work that way
I know the damage has been done
And if I had a magic wand
I'd make the clock run in reverse before I caused you all this pain

I know I bring it on myself
The situation has progressed way past the point of I'm sorry
And there's no point in blaming someone else
I'll take my medicine and hope it goes away by tomorrow
